"That is, the omission of the rate or the way bill was a labor-saving device?"

"Yes, sir, that with the convenience of getting all totals collected at once and directly at the shipper's general auditors' office."

Before adjournment Mr. Kellogg's questions were propounded with a view of showing that all information relative to rates was carefully concealed by the Oil Trust and its shipping roads.

Campaign Speeches

AN EDITOR has called attention to the fact that campaign oratory is robbing many a political candidate of his powers of speech.

There is one voice, however, that increases in persuasive power the more it is used—the voice of a World advertisement.

World advertisements told 19,013 separate stories of "opportunities" during last week's 6 work days-5,817 more than were related by the Herald.
